

SECURITY ALERT

April 26, 2007

Our investment banker, GunnAllen, our strategic and production partner, LifeLink, and certain members of our Advisory Board have been receiving deceptive, inaccurate and malevolent e-mails regarding our company. The e-mails have been generated through "anonymous" e-mail addresses by individuals who have gone to great lengths to conceal their identity. We have good reason believe that these individuals are not shareholders or have ever had any type of business relationship with the company.

It is clear to us this malicious harassment is the action of miscreants who, for unknown reasons, want to seriously harm ODC, its officers and directors as well as interfere with our relationships with our shareholders and our business partners.

The board of directors of the company has appointed a special committee of directors to investigate the specific allegations set forth in these e-mails. After a full review and evaluation of the findings of its investigation, the committee's independent directors concluded that the e-mails present no credible information that the committee believes to be material information not previously disclosed to our shareholders and they determined that the allegations have no credible basis.

We're in the final process of confirming the identity of the individuals. We believe that the actions of these anonymous individuals are likely to continue and we will continue to take appropriate actions to protect our business relationships and continue with the successful growth of our company. If you receive any e-mails from individuals containing tirades, allegations or suspicious statements, please forward them to Thomas M. Wood, Esq., at Shumaker, Loop & Kendrick twood@slk-law.com or call Tom at 813 227 2271.

Thank you very much.
